

Francisco de Silva (University of Toronto Student)

Francisco, nicknamed Francis, is an eighteen year-old Portuguese international first-year Management student at the University of Toronto. He is currently living at the Joan Foley Hall after paying an excess in fees and enjoys his campus life so far. He enjoys TV-shows, video-games, cuisine from all cultures, meeting new people, and is a gym rat, going to the gym almost daily.

Francisco is a very responsible, energetic and outgoing person. He always makes a point to greet others in hallways and prioritizes his personal relationships and responsibilities. He often checks his social media, emails and texts, and constantly checks his calendar to ensure he does not accidentally forgot any events, and stays up to date with his friends, relevant news and information.

Having just moved to Canada, Francisco is also interested in meeting new like-minded people and keeping occupied via various clubs and student associations. While he finds some success in finding interesting clubs via Instagram app and the UTSC Club Hub website, it leaves him feeling like there is a lot to be desired due lots of clubs either being missing entirely on the Club Hub, or being extremely hard to find via Instagram. He is hoping for a more convenient alternative to be available to navigate through clubs, and see their posts and upcoming events.

Sarah McLahren (University of Toronto Club Executive)

Sarah is a twenty-three year-old Management student at the University of Toronto, born and raised in Oakville. She currently lives at an apartment complex around a ten-minute bus ride away from U of T's Scarborough campus, and holds two executive positions at the university's Association of Accounting as the VP of Operations and one of the four Events Directors.

Originally planning to become a software engineer, Sarah was a Computer Science Specialist making POST in her first-year, but after flunking both CSCB07 and CSCB09, two second-year computer science courses, she took the rest of her second-year off, switching to Management in her following year. Instilled with a newfound sense of determination and urgency, Sarah performed admirably in her new program making new friends along the way, and rising through the ranks of her association until eventually joining its executive team. Sarah is now an extremely hard-working, responsible and attentive individual, having experienced failure and learned from her past mistakes.

As one of the Events Directors, Sarah is tasked with leading the development, planning and execution of all the AoA's initiatives and outreach, also working closely with the other Events Directors. Sarah and her team primarily use Instagram as their primary method of communication, and while somewhat successful, the team wishes there was a better alternative for outreach and promoting their events and other deliverables. As the VP of Operations, she also hopes for a smoother method for accepting new and potential members, checking their current members, and informing their current members and any other students interested about their initiatives and events.
